A new method of providing the students of the Paramount Studio of the Stage and Screen with a film test will be put into effect during the school's fall term now in progress.

As the students complete their training on any one number and have it down in a finished way moving pictures will be taken of the routine. These pictures will provide the school with a film library of the work of their students which may be shown to booking agents interested in possibilities of any one person or routine.

The films will also be shown during the year at the parties and entertainments sponsored by the school for the students and their parents.

The moving picture record will also be invaluable in aiding the management of the school to arrange the schedule of the winter revue which is included in the course of training of the school.

The winter revue as now planned will be very similar to the show staged by the "Paramount Sweethearts," which was also trained and booked by Rexene and Markhoff, instructors in the Paramount Studio of Stage and Screen; and will appear on a number of Fox theatre stages in the Southern California district.

Flying Horse Seen In Sky

Constellation of Pegasus Now Visible, says General Official

Flying Horse appears in sky in upside down position. This General Petroleum sketch gives positions of stars and imaginary outline of horse.

Star gazers: Get out your field glasses. The mythological flying horse, known to astronomers as Pegasus, is visible just above the eastern horizon between 9 and 10 o'clock in the evening. Such is the information reaching Fred C. Davies, the Southern division sales manager of General Petroleum Corporation, who says the employees of his company, and a lot of other folks are becoming would-be astronomers these days.

"As thousands of motorists know," he declares, "the winged horse of Greek mythology was inspiration for the flying red horse trademark used in the advertising of Mobilgas and other General Petroleum products. But, perhaps many persons do not know there is a winged horse constellation called Pegasus, in the vast reaches of space beyond our own solar system.

J. Schnellgrove, manager for the Palms Verdes Estates, told deputy sheriffs at sub-station No. 3, that he had seen a truck leaving the Estates this week, carrying a load of eight 30-foot poles. Schnellgrove investigated and found that the poles had been made of eucalyptus trees cut down in the Via Campesina parkway near the golf course. of Corinth as early as 500 B.C., was said to have sprung from the blood of Medusa, and to have been employed by Jupiter to carry the thunder and lightning. Hence, the Flying Red Horse of today, symbol of fire, power and speed.

"The constellation may be seen with the naked eye or field glasses, and within the great square are 30 other stars or suns also visible with the naked eye. Three of the stars of this square, Alpha, Beta and Epsilon, are estimated to be 191, 225 and 145 light years distant from the earth. To be able to locate such a constellation is important. This knowledge once saved the lives of Donald McMillan and a party of explorers, lost on the Polar ice, as it was the means of leading them to safety."
